Mobility for all? Introduction to Gender and its relevance to mobility

DATE and TIME (TIMEZONE) – Insert link to the virtual session here

1. Description

While mobility experiences are undeniably not gender-neutral, this issue has been consistently overlooked in mobility planning. As a result, there is a rising demand to integrate a gender perspective into different content of mobility policies. This session will structurally approach the correlation between gender and mobility planning. In particular, the definition, relevant concepts, and fundamental approach to gender will be presented, followed by a thorough examination of gender-responsiveness political relevance, focusing on the mobility planning context. Moreover, this session will also utilise practical examples and interactive activities, such as discussion, quizzes, and exercises, to emphasise further the importance of the relevance of gender for mobility.

2. Learning Objectives:

- Provide basic knowledge of what gender is and what it is not
- Discuss the broader context of diversity
- Get participants familiar with key approaches to gender
- Develop the link between mobility and gender
- Get to know different gendered dimensions of mobility
